

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	ix
Introduction	1
Invisibility	1
Experiment.....	4
Reformation	7
Meanings.....	9
Researching prisons: an iron garden gate, a haircut and my sister.....	11
Part I	14
Prison Historiography
Part II.....	30
“Reforming” the Prisoner
The inconvenient use of capital punishment.....	31
The shaping of new penal discourses.....	40
The question of prison upgrade.....	45
Setting up the experiment: upgrading imprisonment	49
The penitentiary dream	55
‘Carceral clawback’ and Elizabeth Fry	59
The local and the national.....	67
The Directorate of convict prisons: reformation by discipline.....	73
The Prison Commission: uniformity and prevention	78
Part III.....	90
“Training” the Prisoner
The Gladstone report: the limitation to prisoners’ reformation	91
Towards a theory of training.....	96
The fundamentals of the theory of training.....	100
Plans for reform: pre-war.....	106
Post-war: new plans and the lease of Askham Grange	112
The training for freedom.....	116

Part IV	120
Understanding Open Prisons: The First Women Open Prison HMP Askham Grange
The open prison: surviving under the shadow of the orthodox closed prison.....	122
The prisoners' progression policy: limitations.....	129
Security categorisation: incompatible risk assessment	133
Prisoners' adaptation.....	139
Under-categorisation in a zero-tolerance environment	142
The question of totality of the open prison	145
Organisational scope.....	149
Bureaucratic management of the residents	155
Organisational power.....	158
Conclusion.....	165
Bibliography.....	168

KB 2A A 557