

Inhaltsverzeichnis

Anhang 1: Länderbericht Deutschland	17
A. Grundfragen	17
I. Systematik des Verbraucherinformationsrechts	17
II. Historische Entwicklung	34
III. Private Informationsquellen	37
B. Gesamtschau der Verbraucherinformationsregelungen	40
I. Über einzelne Anspruchsgrundlagen hinausgehende Fragen	40
1. Allgemeine Überlegungen	40
2. Umgang mit (vermeintlich) fehlerhafter oder unvollständiger Information	46
II. Informationsansprüche gegen Behörden	51
1. Informationsbeschaffung, -aufbereitung und -kontrolle durch die Behörden	51
2. Behördenorganisation	59
3. Öffentliche Datenbanken	61
4. Warnhinweise	64
III. Gewährleistung von Unternehmens- und Datenschutz	65
1. Geschäfts- und Betriebsgeheimnisse	65
2. Datenschutz	68
IV. Besonderheiten (vor-)vertraglicher Informationsansprüche	72
1. Mindestinformationen	72
2. Rechtsfolgen	73
3. Andere funktional äquivalente Regelungen	75
V. Praktische Wirksamkeit der Regelungen	76
VI. Produktkennzeichnung und Qualitätskontrollen	83
C. Kostenlasten für die Beteiligten	86
I. Aufwand der Informationsbeschaffung und -erteilung	86
II. Kostentragung	89
III. Kosten-Nutzen-Betrachtung	92
D. Praktische Durchsetzbarkeit	93
I. Durchsetzbarkeit der Informationsansprüche	93
II. Prozessuale Besonderheiten	95
E. Abschließende Würdigung, Wertungsfragen	97
F. Nicht angesprochene Probleme	100
G. Literaturverzeichnis	100

Anhang 2: Länderbericht Belgien	105
A. General principles	105
I. Structure of the consumer information law	105
a. Information obligations under Belgian law	105
1. General information obligations	105
1.1 Law of obligations	105
1.2 Law of 14 July 1991 on commercial practices	106
2. Information obligations for specific products/services	109
2.1 Specific provisions in the LCPC	109
2.2 Royal Decrees based on the LCPC	109
2.3 Safety of products and services	110
2.4 Food sector	112
2.5 E-commerce	114
2.6 Travelling services	114
2.7 Financial services	114
3. Access to documents held by public authorities	115
3.1 Article 32 of the Constitution	115
3.2 Federal Transparency in Governance Act	116
3.3 Regional transparency in governance legislation	118
b. Authorities and private persons as sources of information	119
1. Food sector	120
2. Non food sector	120
3. General Directorate Control and Mediation	121
4. Consumer organizations	122
II. Historical development	124
III. Private sources of information	125
B. General view of the consumer information regulations	126
I. Questions going beyond individual bases of claims	126
1. General considerations	126
2. Dealing with (supposedly) incorrect or incomplete information	128
II. The right to receive information from authorities	130
1. Provision, processing and control of information by authorities	130
1.1 Food sector	131
1.2 Non food sector	132
2. Organization of authorities	133
3. Public Databases	134
4. Warning notices	134

III. Guaranteeing the protection of companies and data	135
1. Industrial and business secrets	135
1.1 General	135
1.2 Relevant legal provisions	136
2. Data protection	138
2.1 Data protection in general	138
2.2 The role of data protection in releasing documents held by public authorities	139
IV. Specific aspects of (pre-) contractual rights to information	140
1. Minimum information	140
2. Legal consequences	140
3. Other functionally equivalent rules	140
V. Practical effects of the rules	141
VI. Product labeling and quality control	142
C. Cost Burdens for the parties involved	145
I. Efforts for obtaining and issuing information	145
II. Bearing the costs	146
III. Cost-benefit analysis	146
D. Practical Enforceability	147
I. Enforceability of the right of information	147
a. Out-of-Court Mechanisms	148
1. Arbitration schemes	148
2. Mediation schemes	148
b. In-court mechanisms	149
1. Judge of the peace	149
2. Collective Redress	149
c. Administrative and criminal sanctions	150
II. Procedural particularities	151
E. Final appreciation, assessment	151
F. Problems that have not been addressed	152
Anhang 3: Länderbericht Frankreich	153
A. Grundfragen	153
I. Systematik des Verbraucherinformationsrechts	153
II. Historische Entwicklung	159
III. Private Informationsquellen	161
B. Gesamtschau der Verbraucherinformationsregelungen	164
I. Über einzelne Anspruchsgrundlagen hinausgehende Fragen	164
1. Allgemeine Überlegungen	164
2. Umgang mit (vermeintlich) fehlerhafter oder unvollständiger Information	166

II.	Informationsansprüche gegen Behörden	170
1.	Informationsbeschaffung, -aufbereitung und -kontrolle durch die Behörden	170
2.	Behördenorganisation	173
3.	Öffentliche Datenbanken	175
4.	Warnhinweise	176
III.	Gewährleistung von Unternehmens- und Datenschutz	177
1.	Geschäfts- und Betriebsgeheimnisse	177
2.	Datenschutz	179
IV.	Besonderheiten (vor-)vertraglicher Informationsansprüche	181
1.	Mindestinformationen	181
2.	Rechtsfolgen	182
3.	Andere funktional äquivalente Regelungen	182
V.	Praktische Wirksamkeit der Regelungen	182
VI.	Produktkennzeichnung und Qualitätskontrollen	186
C.	Kostenlasten für die Beteiligten	190
I.	Aufwand der Informationsbeschaffung und -erteilung	190
II.	Kostentragung	191
III.	Kosten-Nutzen-Betrachtung	192
D.	Praktische Durchsetzbarkeit	193
I.	Durchsetzbarkeit der Informationsansprüche	193
II.	Prozessuale Besonderheiten	194
E.	Abschließende Würdigung, Wertungsfragen	195
F.	Nicht angesprochene Probleme	196
G.	Anlagen	197
	Anlage I	197
	Anlage II	199
	Anlage III	200
	 Anhang 4: Länderbericht Dänemark	 203
A.	The role of consumer information	203
B.	Public and Private Consumer Information	203
C.	Legal bases of Consumers' Right to Information	205
D.	Specific Sector Rules.	209
E.	Assessment	212

Anhang 5: Länderbericht Schweden	213
A. General Principles	213
I. Structure of the consumer information law	213
II. Historical development	228
III. Private sources of information	228
B. General view of the consumer information regulations	229
I. Questions going beyond individual bases of claims	229
1. General considerations	229
2. Dealing with (supposedly) incorrect or incomplete information	230
II. The right to receive information from authorities	232
1. Provision, processing and control of information by authorities	232
2. Organisation of authorities	235
3. Public Databases	236
4. Warning notices	237
III. Guaranteeing the protection of companies and data	238
1. Industrial and business secrets	238
2. Data protection	239
IV. Specific aspects of (pre-) contractual rights to information	241
1. Minimum information	241
2. Legal consequences	242
3. Other functionally equivalent rules	242
V. Practical effects of the rules	242
VI. Product labelling and quality control	244
C. Cost burdens for the parties involved	246
I. Efforts for obtaining and issuing information	246
II. Bearing the costs	247
III. Cost-benefit analysis	248
D. Practical Enforceability	248
I. Enforceability of the right to information	248
II. Procedural particularities	249
E. Final appreciation, assessment	250
F. Problems that have not been addressed	251
G. Anlage	252

Anhang 6: Länderbericht Großbritannien	255
Commentary	255
I. Introduction – Freedom of Information	255
II. Consumer rights to Information	262
1. Consumer Credit Agreements	262
2. Consumer Hire Agreements	263
3. European Measures	264
4. Consumer Contracts	264
5. Consumer Protection	265
6. Product and Process Information	268
7. Labelling and Leaflets	273
8. Food Products	282
9. Utilities	283
10. Financial Services	287
11. Estate Agents	290
12. Companies Generally	291
13. Nuclear Power	291
14. Environmental Information	292
15. Information under the Civil Procedure Rules	292
16. Public Databases	293
17. Consumer Champions	294
18. Advertising	295
Questionnaire	296
Introduction	296
A. General Principles	297
I. Structure of the consumer information law	297
II. Historical development	300
III. Private sources of information	301
B. General view of the consumer information regulations	302
I. Questions going beyond individual bases of claims	302
1. General considerations	302
2. Dealing with (supposedly) incorrect or incomplete information	303
II. The right to receive information from authorities	305
1. Provision, processing and control of information by authorities	305
2. Organisation of authorities	307
3. Public Databases	308
4. Warning notices	309

III.	Guaranteeing the protection of companies and data	309
1.	Industrial and business secrets	309
2.	Data protection	311
IV.	Specific aspects of (pre-) contractual rights to information	312
1.	Minimum information	312
2.	Legal consequences	312
3.	Other functionally equivalent rules	313
V.	Practical effects of the rules	313
VI.	Product labelling and quality control	315
C.	Cost burdens for the parties involved	317
I.	Efforts for obtaining and issuing information	317
II.	Bearing the costs	319
III.	Cost-benefit analysis	319
D.	Practical Enforceability	320
I.	Enforceability of the right to information	320
II.	Procedural particularities	321
E.	Final appreciation, assessment	321
F.	Problems that have not been addressed	322
Anhang 7: Länderbericht Irland		323
Overview of Consumer Information Rights in Ireland		323
I.	Introduction	323
II.	Overview of the Public Bodies with an Obligation to Provide or Regulate Consumer Information	327
1.	The National Consumer Agency	327
2.	The Competition Authority	329
3.	The Food Safety Authority	330
4.	The National Standards Authority	331
5.	The Irish Medicines Board	332
6.	The Financial Services Regulator	332
7.	The Commission for Communications Regulation	333
8.	Other Regulators and Public bodies	333
III.	Overview of the Freedom of Information Act 1997 - 2003	334
1.	The Right of Access to Public Records	334
2.	Scope of the Act	335
a.	Who can make a request?	335
b.	From which public bodies can you request a record?	335
c.	What kind of information can you request?	336
d.	Formalities	336
e.	Excluded records	337
3.	The Appeal Process	340
4.	Charges for FOI Requests	341

A.	General Principles	342
	I. Structure of consumer information law	342
	II. Historical Development	347
	1. Consumer Information Institutions	347
	2. Consumer Information Rights	348
	III. Private sources of information	348
B.	General view of the consumer information regulations	350
	I. Questions going beyond individual bases of claims	350
	1. General considerations	350
	2. Dealing with (supposedly) incorrect or incomplete information	354
	II. The right to receive information from authorities	356
	1. Provision, processing and control of information by authorities	356
	2. Organisation of authorities	358
	3. Public Databases	360
	4. Warning notices	360
	III. Guaranteeing the protection of companies and data	361
	1. Industrial and business secrets	361
	2. Data protection	365
	IV. Specific aspects of (pre-) contractual rights to information	366
	1. Minimum information	366
	a. Pre-contractual rights to information at common law	366
	b. Legislative obligations to provide pre-contractual information	367
	2. Legal consequences	367
	3. Other functionally equivalent rules	368
	V. Practical effects of the rules	368
	VI. Product labelling and quality control	369
	a. Mandatory Labelling of Food Items	370
	(1) Pre-packaged Food	370
	(2) Warnings where there is a danger to the health of consumers	371
	(3) Nutrition Labelling	372
	(4) Food Supplements	373
	(5) Food for particular nutritional uses	374
	(6) Genetically Modified Organisms	374
	(7) Organic Food	375
	(8) Vertical Legislation	375
	b. Mandatory Labelling of Medical Substances	375

c.	General Product Safety	376
(1)	The General Product Safety Directive	376
(2)	Children's Toys	377
(3)	The Consumer Protection Act 2007	377
(4)	Mandatory labelling of Other Products	378
d.	Traffic Lights & Daily Guideline Amount Labelling	378
e.	»Safe Pork« Labelling	379
f.	Environmentally Friendly products	380
C.	Cost burdens for the parties involved	382
I.	Efforts for obtaining and issuing information	382
II.	Bearing the costs	383
III.	Cost-benefit analysis	383
D.	Practical Enforceability	384
I.	Enforceability of the right to information	384
E.	Final appreciation, assessment	385
F.	Problems that have not been addressed	386
Anhang 8: Länderbericht der Vereinigten Staaten von Amerika		387
A.	General Principles	387
I.	Structure of the consumer information law	387
II.	Historical development	409
III.	Private sources of information	411
B.	General view of the consumer information regulations	413
I.	Questions going beyond individual bases of claims	413
1.	General considerations	413
2.	Dealing with (supposedly) incorrect or incomplete information	414
II.	The right to receive information from authorities	415
1.	Provision, processing and control of information by authorities	415
2.	Organisation of authorities	417
3.	Public Databases	418
4.	Warning notices	419
III.	Guaranteeing the protection of companies and data	419
1.	Industrial and business secrets	420
2.	Data protection	422
IV.	Specific aspects of (pre-) contractual rights to information	424
1.	Minimum information	424
2.	Legal consequences	424
3.	Other functionally equivalent rules	424
V.	Practical effects of the rules	425
VI.	Product labelling and quality control	426

C.	Cost burdens for the parties involved	428
	I. Efforts for obtaining and issuing information	428
	II. Bearing the costs	429
	III. Cost-benefit analysis	430
D.	Practical Enforceability	431
	I. Enforceability of the right to information	431
	II. Procedural particularities	432
E.	Final appreciation, assessment	433
F.	Problems that have not been addressed	434